INSTRUCTIONS TO NEW MAIL BIDDERS

Bidding by mail permits you to participate in an auction as though you were attending it in person. The procedure is really quite simple. You tell us what you want, and the maximum amount you are willing to pay. We then, as your personal agent, try to buy the items listed for you at the lowest possible price.

The enclosed mail bid form has two sides for you to fill in. The front side provides all the information we will need to register you as a bidder, execute your bids for you and deliver your lots to you if you are a successful bidder. Please answer all the questions that may apply to you. DON'T FORGET TO SIGN YOUR BID SHEET.

On the back side are pairs of columns where you may list your bids. After carefully reading the lot description, write down the lot number and the maximum amount you are willing to pay for that lot. Don't forget that a 10% buyer's fee will be added to your actual purchase price if you are the lucky bidder. Continue to list lot numbers and bids for each of the lots you are interested in buying.

LOT	BID
47	100
143	300
280	175

When we receive your bid sheet, we will record your bids at the amount you have authorized us to bid for you, and we will, in addition, note any lots where an increase is authorized if absolutely needed to win the lot. For example, if the sample bid sheet shown at the right were yours, we would enter your bid on lot #5 as $200. If yours was the highest bid received, you would be the purchaser at $200. (plus 10%) or perhaps even less. If the second highest bid received on the lot was substantially less, your bid would be reduced to a "normal" increment above that second-highest bid, just as it would be if you were present at the sale yourself to execute your own bids. If you have authorized a percentage increase on the front side of your bid sheet and the bidding by others has exceeded your basic bid, we will then, as your personal agent, increase your bid to the minimum amount necessary to obtain the lot for you. The authorized increase will never be used except when your basic bid is exceeded.

Before you mail your bid sheet, do be sure to check it over to make certain you have bid on the correct lot(s) and that your bids are the ones you are both willing and able to pay for. Enjoy the catalogue, place bids on everything you would like to buy. If time is running out and you feel your bid sheet may arrive too late to be included, you may call our office between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, giving us the lot numbers and amount you will pay for each lot, over the telephone. Please make sure you immediately send in your bid sheet for confirmation. Also, you may FAX your bid sheet to us. As your personal agents we wish you every success.

VIEWING OF LOTS

Lots will be available for viewing by prospective bidders at our office each day, Monday through Friday, by APPOINTMENT ONLY, between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. October 9, 1995 through November 7, 1995 only.

The Pegasus Coinage of Corinth and her Colonies

We have probably all seen examples of the Pegasus coinage of Corinth or her colonies and made various assumptions about the wide-spread use of a similar motif. Until not long ago, I assumed that the Pegasus/helmeted Athena designs had been created in Corinth, based on local mythology and other legends and imparted to the colonies at the time of their creation. It turns out that I was not entirely correct.

It appears that Corinth, controlling the strategic and commercially important isthmus between Central Greece and the Peloponnesos, established her first colony, Syracuse, in about 730 BC with the various colonies in Bruttium, Acarnania and Epiros coming into being during the next century or so. What caused this colonial movement? During the initial phase of the Greek "colonial" period (circa 730-550 BC), the major impetus may have been "land hunger" due to growth of various communities in Greece, or possibly due to climatic changes which reduced the food production in the region. At any rate, it appears that the goal was to establish a "copy-cats" of the "mother" city (metropolis) by sending out a cross-section of the populace of the founding city, complete with government, rules, regulations, and so forth. Most sources indicate that, between about 730 and 650 BC at least, colonies were not established with expansion of trade as a major consideration. The Corinthian colonies in Acarnania and Epiros certainly came to be of great benefit in trade during later times, due to their control over so many trade routes and areas in northwestern Greece and their creation may have occurred when this was becoming more of a major factor in determining the location of colonies.

The earliest coinages of Corinth feature a Pegasus with tightly curled wings either flying or walking on the obverse, with a "mill sail" or "swastika" design incuse square on the reverse. This coinage developed during the 6th century BC; by about 500 BC, the head of Athena wearing a Corinthian helmet began to appear on the reverse. Over the years, these basic designs continued, with more artistic renditions of the designs and the curled wing gradually becoming pointed. The period roughly encompassed between 400 and 300 BC brings what can generally be referred to as the "Fine Style" coinage, the most pleasing artistically for Corinth and her colonies.

Now it's time to discuss my assumption about the uniformity of coinage in Corinth and her colonies as being attributed to the initial colonization. The very earliest colonies of Corinth were created before Corinth had established a coinage particular to that city. It is not that this is such a revelation, it's just that I didn't think about it or really look at the dates involved. At any rate, by examining the early coinage of the Corinthian settlements in Sicily, Bruttium, and northwestern Greece, one finds many other design elements on the local coinage, but no Pegasus until 450 BC in Anaktorion and about 350 BC in the other locations. Why (or why not)? In reference to the colonies in Italy and Sicily, there may not have been much direct contact between Corinth and her siblings due to the involvement of Corinth in the various political and military activities between the various city states of Greece, and of the colonies were probably more involved in regional affairs than Greece.

It must be noted that Corinth, while a major, rich city of Greece, was not one of the "high rollers" and often a follower in the activities of Athens, Thebes, Sparta and of Persia. The final culmination of major conflict between Athens and Sparta came with the ruination of Athens in 404 BC, ending the Peloponnesian War, with the subsequent decline of Spartan and Theban hegemony and the consolidation of power in Macedonia. These changes in the power centers of Greece allowed Corinth to briefly expand commercially and politically in a Central Greece not plagued with war or shifting alliances.

It is during this time, from about 350 to 300 BC, that nearly all of the cities which had been established as colonies of Corinth utilized the Pegasos/Athena designs on their silver Staters or fractions. It is interesting to note the temporary appearance of the Corinthian designs and value standards on the coins of Syracuse during the time of Timoleon (344-317 BC) and Leontinoi during the time of Dion (circa 355 BC), and the tremendous variety of other colonial and metropolitan issues during this period. It is obvious that these pieces were widely received in commercial activities of the time due to various large hoards of mixed-issue pieces found in Sicily and elsewhere.

What caused the widespread use of the Corinthian-style coinage during this time? It is not likely that this came about by agreements between Corinth and the other cities or because Corinth demanded such "honor" due to their past relationships. It is quite likely that there were ties to the "metropolis" but why would these bring this "uniform" coinage into being at that particular time? It is possible that these cities did imitate the coinage of Corinth to establish (or re-establish) a link with this major city in Greece, but they may also have adopted the designs to help themselves commercially by imitating the main international coin style and standard of the time. It is possible that all of these factors were involved with different weight assigned to each, depending on the community or circumstances, but we will never really know. What we can know and appreciate is the great diversity of symbols and marking which occur on the Pegasos/Athena coinage produced by these cities during this particular period of history.

MYTHOLOGY AND THE COINAGE OF CORINTH

The coinage of Corinth and her colonies is extremely beautiful and interesting. But the reasons why they have such a motif are perhaps more interesting. Now you might be saying that there are a lot of interesting Greek coins; what makes the coinage of Corinth so special?

The thing that I find most interesting about these coins is the mythology. There is a lot of Corinthian mythology that refers to Athena and Pegasus, the two figures which occur on the coinage of Corinth.

Pegasus is a winged horse that is supposedly the offspring of the sea god Poseidon and the Gorgon Medusa. According to legend, Medusa was a very beautiful woman with long streaming hair. Accordingly Medusa was in the temple of Athena and had intercourse with Poseidon while he was in the form of a horse or a bird. Medusa then became pregnant with Pegasus and his brother Chrysaor.

Athena became very angry at the desecration of her temple, and transformed Medusa into a hideous Gorgon, with serpents for hair; she was so hideous that anyone who looked upon her was turned to stone. Athena later sent Perseus to kill Medusa. Perseus, with the assistance of Athena, beheaded the Gorgon by watching her reflection in his shield. Pegasus and Chrysaor were then born from the blood of Medusa.

Shortly after he was born, Pegasus flew to the top of mount Helicon in Boeotia, the sacred place of the nine Muses (Clio, Thalia, Erato, Euterpe, Polyhymnia, Calliope, Terpsichore, Urania, and Melpomene), the goddesses of various human inspirations. At the top of the mountain Pegasus struck his hoof on the ground and water gushed forth. This formed the fountain Hippocrene (fountain of the horse), which became the favorite place of the Muses, and Pegasus then became sacred to them.

Pegasus was later captured and tamed by Bellerophon (son of the Corinthian king Glaucus). Bellerophon received his name by slaying Belleros the tyrant of Corinth. After doing so Bellerophon fled to Tiryns where he took refuge with the king Proetus. The king proclaimed him to be a hero for the death of Belleros, and they feasted for many days. Soon after, the king's wife, Sthenoboea, fell in love with Bellerophon and tried to seduce him. Bellerophon rejected her and she told the king that he had tried to rape her. Proetus believed her and wanted Bellerophon killed, but did not want to do it himself. He sent Bellerophon to Iobates (king of Lycia) with a letter requesting to have him put to death. Iobates did not want to kill him either, so he ordered him to go out and kill the Chimera. The Chimera was a fire breathing monster that had the head of a lion, the body of a goat and its tail was a serpent. At the time the Chimera was causing great havoc in Lycia and Iobates thought the Chimera would kill Bellerophon for him.

After being informed of his quest, Bellerophon sought advice from Polyeidus. Polyeidus told Bellerophon he should try and capture the winged horse Pegasus and use him to help defeat the Chimera. Polyeidus advised him to seek help from the goddess Athena for this task. After being told all of this Bellerophon stayed the night in the temple of Athena. While he was sleeping the goddess came to him in a dream and gave him a golden bridle. When Bellerophon woke up he found the bridle still in his hand.

The next day Bellerophon set forth for Pirene, a famous spring in Corinth. There Bellerophon captured and tamed Pegasus. After doing so Bellerophon used Pegasus to fly back to Lycia to fight the Chimera. He killed the Chimera by flying above it, shooting it with arrows and throwing pieces of lead into its mouth. The Chimera's breath melted the lead, and as it ran down its throat it killed it.

After killing the Chimera Bellerophon returned to Lycia. Iobates disappointed that Bellerophon was still alive, sent him on another quest, this time against the Amazons, a tribe of female warriors. It was said that the Amazons all cut off one breast in order to use the bow better, and that they hated men; the only time they had dealings with them was in war, or to mate, and would kill all the male children they bore.

Bellerophon, with the help of Pegasus, defeated the Amazons and returned to Lycia only to be sent on yet another quest. This time it was against the Solymi, a race of warriors who inhabited the mountains in Lycia. After defeating the Solymi, Bellerophon began his journey back to Lycia where he was ambushed by twenty of Iobates's best soldiers. After Bellerophon killed the soldiers, Iobates realized killing Bellerophon was hopeless. Iobates then made amends to Bellerophon and gave him his daughter Cassandra for marriage, and named him heir to the throne of Lycia.

After a while Bellerophon started to think of himself as one of the gods. He decided he was going to mount Pegasus and fly up into the heavens, to take his place with the rest of the gods. This angered Zeus who sent down a bee to sting Pegasus and throw his rider. Bellerophon then fell to his death and Pegasus continued up to the heavens where it is said he became the favorite animal of Zeus, who put him among the constellations.
